

World Teachers' Day October 5: Time for Democracy

On World Teachers' Day, October 5, we celebrate all teachers – in Sweden and in the world. This year, we'd also like to talk about time.

We teachers have been great at adapting to Covid-19, but it's important to keep track of our working hours.

We need time to teach, for recovery, and for meetings that strengthen democracy in the workplace.

The key to this is the union representative. A colleague and member whom we have elected and who represents us when we deal with union matters, such as schedule and time.

Do you already have a union representative? Great, then you can work on these issues together.

Do you lack a representative? Get started at lararforbundet.se/bliombud.

We need to be many to put weight behind our demands. Become a member! Become a union representative! That way you will contribute to democratic values both in Sweden and in the world.
