Kitchen Appliances Integration (Option for 600 shelf)
Kitchen appliances such as dishwashers, refrigerators, ovens, and similar built-in units may be installed within designated cabinet compartments. The installer is responsible for verifying that the appliance dimensions, ventilation requirements, and installation clearances are compatible with the cabinet's maximum allowable dimensions before installation.

Any required openings for water supply, drainage, electrical connections, ventilation, or utility routing must be created by the installer based on the appliance manufacturer's specifications. All plumbing and electrical installations shall be carried out in accordance with applicable local regulations and standards.

Where applicable, the supplied cabinet door may be mounted directly onto the appliance using the appliance manufacturer's fixing system and installation instructions. Proper alignment and adjustment of the door are required to ensure correct operation of both the appliance and the cabinet assembly.

Failure to verify appliance compatibility, installation clearances, and service connections may result in impaired functionality or damage to the cabinet and appliance.

Sink Installation

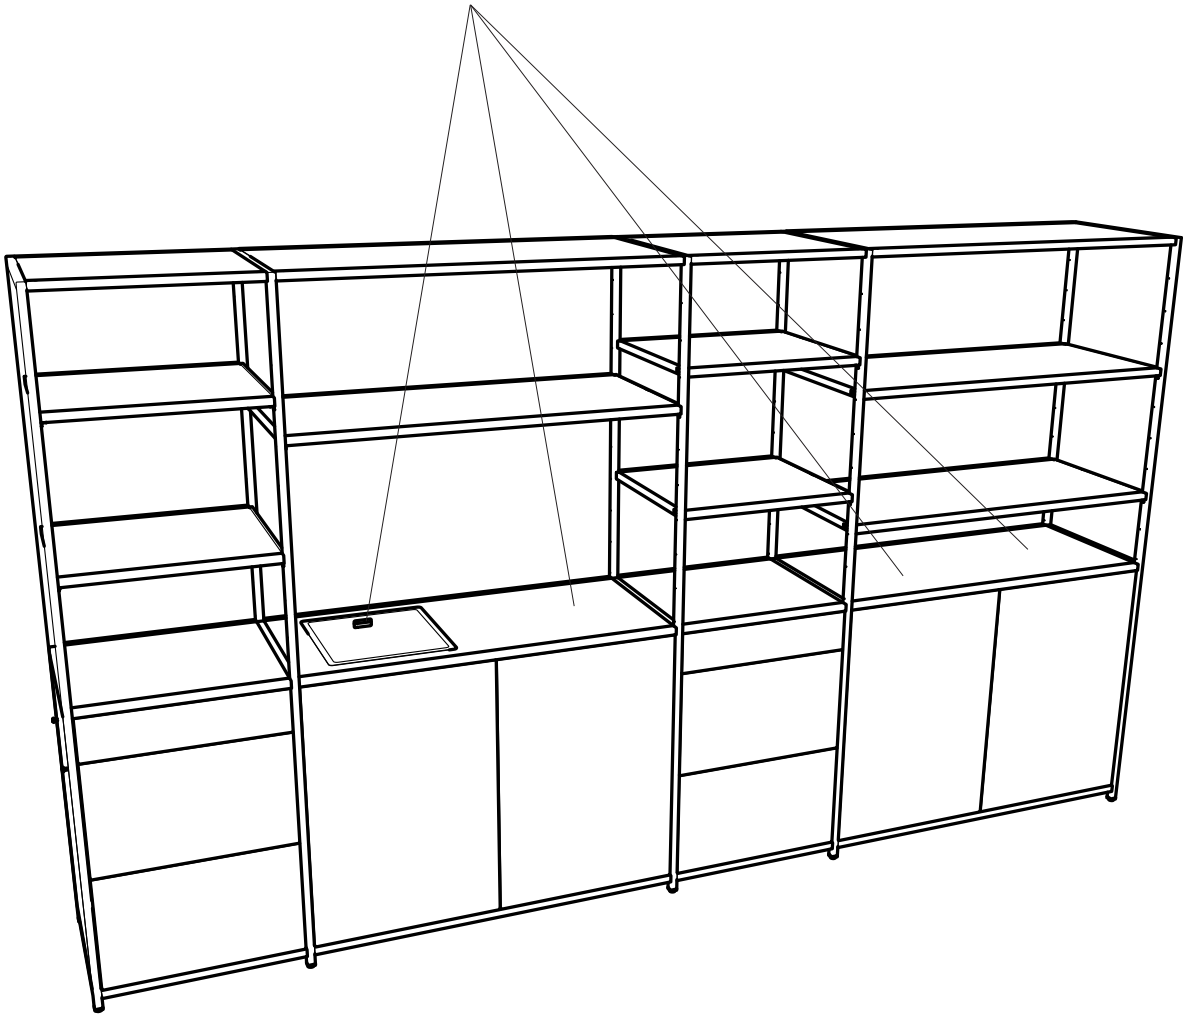

If a sink is installed, all cut-outs in shelves, panels, or cabinets components shall be made by the installer in accordance with the sink manufacturer's specifications. The installer is responsible for ensuring that all cut surfaces are properly sealed using a suitable waterproof sealant, including silicone where applicable, to prevent moisture ingress and material damage. All plumbing connections shall be carried out in accordance with applicable local regulations and standards.

SENAB takes no responsibility for damages, defects, swelling, moisture intrusion, or reduced product performance resulting from incorrect sink installation.
